A Child Prays for Her Pope

The door of the Sacred Heart church opened . . . a shaft of light pierced the darkness . . . and a girl, Anna Vignolo, 4, stood momentarily between the light and dark. On tiptoe, she made her way down the aisle to the altar, where, her face glowing with the innocent beauty of simple faith, she knelt . . . beside Father Emilio Donazan . . . and prayed for her beloved Pope Pius XI. Then, sure her prayers were heard, she arose, tiptoed to the great door of the North End church . . . where, as the light pierced the gloom, she thought that perhaps the Pope had come from such a light to life . . . and now had returned to the same light from the darkness of life.

POPE PIUS BURIED WITH SOLEMN RITE UNDER VAST ALTAR

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 14 (AP)—Pope Pius XI was buried today beneath the great central altar of St. Peter's Cathedral.

His triple casket, wrapped in red wool, was lowered to a final resting place in moving, semi-private ceremonies lasting an hour and a half.

CARD. O'CONNELL URGES PRAYERS FOR POPE PIUS

Preparing to sail tomorrow on the Saturnia for Vatican City, where he will participate in the election for a successor to Pope Pius XI, William Cardinal O'Connell wrote the following tribute to the late pontiff expressly for the Boston Evening American.

By WILLIAM CARDINAL O'CONNELL

(Archbishop of Boston, and Dean of the American Hierarchy in the United States).
(Copyright, 1939)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—In this sorrowful hour for the Holy Roman Catholic Church there is not much more that can be said of our great loss in the death of Pope Pius XI.

The church has lost a fearless champion of truth and right and a man who never knew what fear meant.

The late Holy Father possessed a rare quality of mind and character which made him an outstanding individual, not only in the eyes of the church and its followers, but to civilization throughout the world.

In a world troubled as it is today, it was a blessing of God that we had him for a source of strength.

He exemplified himself to the world by his forward honesty of dealing with nations which was based entirely on the principles of Christianity and civilization. That was the guidance of all his actions.

His late years were of intense, but very patient, suffering. Every day he undertook the task before him and carried that principle right to the very end.

Catholics throughout the United States should make every effort to attend the celebration of the Holy Mass today and offer up their prayers for the repose of the soul of the late Holy Father. I hope those unable to attend these services will devote a few moments and offer a prayer for our beloved Pope.

The last rites reached a climax as cardinals and bishops, many of them aged and most of them appointees of Pope Pius, filed slowly past the casket.

Over it each made the sign of the cross.

Then the casket was carried in a procession, preceded by a crucifix bearer and long lines of lighted candles.

UNDER VAST ALTAR

Before the altar of confession, under the immense dome of St. Peter's, the cortege halted.

Here a framework with ropes and pulleys had been erected beside a sunken altar floor, which was level with the cathedral grottoes.

The casket was lowered to a funeral carriage. While the choir sang its last notes the casket was rolled into the grottoes, to rest near the tombs of Pius XI's two immediate predecessors, Benedict XV and Pius X.

His tomb was under the great altar where only a pope celebrates mass.

At this altar, during his 17-year pontificate, Pius had officiated at the church's most solemn and moving ceremonies.

Hundreds of thousands of the faithful had watched him there—first in robust health and recently weakened by illness as he performed his duties as Holy Father of the Catholic world.

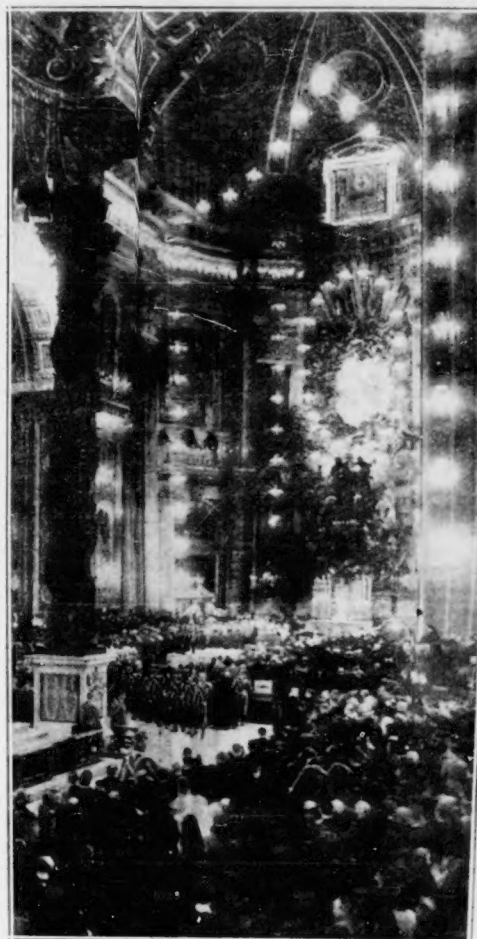

IN SHARP CONTRAST

Today's entombment ritual, conducted behind closed doors, contrasted strikingly with the pomp of the living Pope's appearances in St. Peter's. The great crowds of those appearances—often numbering more than 50,000—were missing.

There were comparatively few invited mourners—cardinals, bishops and other prelates of the papal court, diplomats and papal aristocrats.

Lacking, too, were the fanfare of silver trumpets and the excited cries of "Viva La Papa" ("Long Live the Pope"), which customarily

Hugh Walpole, Novelist, Tells of Rome's Quiet Grief

How the Vatican in deepest mourning prepared for the burial of one of the best-loved Popes of the Catholic Church is described herewith in a picturesque eye-witness account by a world-famous novelist.

By HUGH WALPOLE

(World Copyright, 1939, by International News Service)

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 14—I saw the Pope lying in state just before his burial today.

I am a man who has been writing novels his whole life. People are of great interest to me. And I do not know how long ago it was when I, who am not a Roman Catholic and am very English by tradition and circumstance, felt that the Pope who has just left us was someone with whom I had been in close contact.

I had never seen him. It may have been his love for climbing or his courage when he went to Poland just after the war and carried out with simple and direct bravery the job he had to do. It may have

HUGH WALPOLE

Seen his photograph. I cannot say. But I felt a personal closeness to this Pope. So, just off an airplane, I saw him for the first time removed into a world of his own, glittering, brilliantly-colored, yet austere.

ROBED AS CARDINAL

He was lying magnificently robed as a cardinal in a purple and white sash and a superb golden mitre. Behind him stood a gigantic plain wooden crucifix and behind that again the superb Michelangelo altar.

Great candlesticks, their flames blowing a little in the breeze that perhaps the great passing crowd made; the noble guards, chosen from the grandest families of Italy, arrayed in their splendid uniforms yet serving patiently without stirring, without moving

Parents' Divorce Changed Path of Bette Davis Life

"I am a New Englander in heart and in fact," says Bette Davis proudly, and one can sense the toss of the head, the flash in her eyes as she says it. In yesterday's Boston Record Jimmy Fidler, the Sage of Hollywood, wrote: "I don't know much about Bette Davis' other domestic virtues, but she's a whiz at baking Boston beans . . ."

So this is the story of Bette Davis, and of how she became one of Hollywood's greatest stars, again mentioned this year as a possibility for the Academy Award for her performance in "Jezebel," an award she won in 1935 for her acting in "Dangerous." It is a story of Lowell, Somerville, Winchester, Wellesley, Ashburnham and Provincetown . . . It is a story of Berkshire Hills, of New Hampshire in the Summer, Maine beaches and of long New England Winter evenings before roaring fires . . .

Codfish Cakes in Hollywood

By GEORGE D. CLARKE

Harlow Davis, Bette's father, was a good man and kind, but he was as quick, as nervous of temperament as is Bette herself . . .

BETTE DAVIS AS YOUNG NEWTON GIRL

He was quick to misinterpret things that were harmlessly said, and quick in his resentment. Quarrels were not infrequent, but generally smoothed themselves over quickly in waves of contrition. The sweetness of forgiveness did much to lessen the bitterness of discord.

Bette and Barbara, being so young, didn't comprehend what was going on . . . Their days in Somerville were given to long hours of play in which Bette was always the heroine of whatever game they played, with Barbara her willing stage.

The world was full of war in those days—it was in the difficult times when German legions were hurtling through France and Belgium in their mad dream of world conquest—and one of the favorite games of the little girls was to play at war nursing.

Bette, in a nurse's scarf, fashioned from whatever was available, was always nurse, and Barbara was either her assistant, or, if no other patient was handy, was cast in that role.

Bette planned to be a nurse in

TRAIN KILLS GIRL, FIFTH VICTIM IN TRAGEDY FAMILY

Orphaned ten years ago when her parents and two brothers were burned to death in Dorchester, a Medford parochial schoolgirl was fatally injured today in a train accident at North Somerville station.

Police Press Drive to Bar Illegal Taxis

A police drive to force improperly licensed taxicabs off the road continued today, with report of hackney license bureau officials that many drivers had failed to comply with city regulations.

More than 25 cabs of one Boston company were still without necessary credentials, investigating officers reported.

They said these drivers lacked windshield medallions, bearing their license numbers. Passengers using cabs not properly registered at police headquarters would find themselves unable to recover damages in case of accident, authorities warned.

Margaret Kopf

The girl made her home with an aunt, Miss Grace Commiskey, of Newburn avenue, Medford.

At the time of the accident, Margaret was on her way to St. Clement's school, Medford.

Fate dealt her its first cruel blow in 1929. On May 25 of that year, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kopf, died in a fire which swept their home in East Cottage street, Dorchester.

Two sons were also burned to death.

Little Margaret, then four, was the only survivor.

In today's tragedy her skull was fractured. She died without recovering consciousness.

New Idea Thief Flees With $90

In the perennial game of cops and robbers, a youth today gave a new headache to police, who heaved they knew all the rackets.

Entering a drugstore in Tremont street, he bought a bottle of rubbing alcohol and one of ginger ale, and outside the store he dropped the bag, both bottles breaking.

Returning, he asked the clerk to lend him a nickel so he could telephone home and break the bad news.

"But, you'd better sweep that glass off the sidewalk," he suggested to the clerk.

While the clerk was industriously sweeping the stranger took $90 from a safe and vanished.

Hull Vetoes World Arms Parley Plan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (INS)—Secretary of State Hull today vetoed a Congressional proposal that President Roosevelt summon world powers to a disarmament conference.

Councilor's Car Ditched In Mystery

Mystery accompanied an automobile accident today in Huntington avenue, Roxbury, when a car, said by police to be registered to President George A. Murray of the city council, skidded into a WPA sewer project excavation.

Although at first it was reported the driver, injured, had been taken to City Hospital, police later said they could not find him registered there and were unable to find any neighborhood doctor who had treated him.

At Murray's home in West Second street, South Boston, a woman declared she did not know who had been in the car.

Trolley traffic was tied up in Huntington avenue for more than 20 minutes before wreckers hauled the badly damaged car from the ditch, 15 feet deep.

Downtown stores and office workers waiting at Parker Hill and other streets for bus and street car transportation saw the accident and rescue work. A throng of excited spectators increased the congestion.

Demand Brandeis Post Go to West

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—The retirement of Justice Louis D. Brandeis from the Supreme Court brought a chorus of senatorial demands today that a Westerner be appointed to the seat he held for nearly 23 years.

Only one member of the court, Western legislators pointed out, comes from beyond the Mississippi River. He is Justice Pierce Butler of Minnesota.

The 82-year-old Brandeis, whose shock of unruly iron-gray hair made him a picturesque figure on the bench, made known his decision to retire in a one-sentence note to President Roosevelt.

TRIBUTES GENERAL

The President, recuperating at the White House from the gripe, promptly penned a letter of regret, in which he said:

"The country has needed you through all these years, and I hope you will realize, as your old friends do, how unanimous the nation has been in its gratitude to you."

Congressional tributes to Brandeis were general, in contrast to the future aroused over his appointment by President Wilson in 1916. He was the first Jew to sit on the court, and his critics had pictured him as a radical and a violent partisan.

It was more than four months before the Senate confirmed his nomination, 47 to 22.

In his long service, Brandeis constantly enunciated the rights of the common man and vigorously supported social experimentation. He voted to sustain much of the New Deal legislation which a majority of the court held unconstitutional.

Senators Adams and Johnson, Colorado Democrats, declared their support of Federal Judge Sam Bratton of New Mexico. Senator Connally (D.), Texas, said he would recommend Federal Circuit Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson Jr., of Texas, but added that Bratton "would be fine."

LANDIS POSSIBILITY

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) advocated appointment of Dean Wiley Rutledge of the University of Iowa Law School, who was reported to have been under consideration when Felix Frankfurter recently was selected to succeed the late Justice Cardozo.

Should the President again ignore sectional demands, there were reports that he might consider Federal Judge Florence E. Allen of Ohio; Samuel Rosenman and Ferdinand Pecora, New York Supreme Court Justices; Attorney General Frank Murphy; Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson; and James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard Law School.

Dean Landis May Win Brandeis Post

Once a law clerk of Justice Louis D. Brandeis, retired, Dean James McCauley Landis of Harvard Law School has an excellent chance to succeed him on the bench of the Supreme Court, according to word received here today.

After his apprenticeship to Brandeis, Landis collaborated with Felix Frankfurter, new Supreme Court Justice from Massachusetts, on a book titled "The Business of the Supreme Court."

Still under 40, he is accounted an advanced liberal, in the tradition leading back through Frankfurter and Brandeis to Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Cite Saltonstall Views on Oath

Citing Governor Saltonstall's own recent proclamation on national defense, which urged every citizen to renew a pledge of allegiance to the flag and country, ex-Representative Thomas A. Dorgan, sponsor of the Teachers' Oath law, appeared before the state legislature's committee on education today to battle proposed repeal of the measure.

Dorgan, who was accompanied by State Commander James J. McGuire of the American Legion, cited the governor's proclamation in answer of those who asserted Saltonstall favored repeal, and had agreed to sign the repeal measure.

Proponents for repeal included President Daniel Marsh of Boston University, Dean George H. Chase of Harvard, President Bancroft Beatty of Simmons, Russell P. Burkhardt, spokesman for the Massachusetts Junior High School Teachers' Association, Mrs. George League of the Parents Teachers Association and many others.

President Marsh asserted: "The law serves no useful purpose. It points the wrong way. It points toward regimentation and government control of education."

Others spoke in similar vein.

Busmen in Crash Critically Injured

SUDBURY, Feb. 14—Two bus drivers from New York were in critical condition at Marlboro Hospital today following a skidding accident on the Boston Post road near the Davis turkey farm.

Five passengers hurt in the same collision, between two Boston-New York buses were able to leave the hospital after treatment for minor injuries. Two others were treated by police for superficial injuries.

The drivers were Willis Grove, 32, Bronx, N. Y., and Alvin Kressler, 30, Long Island City, N. Y. Kressler was driving without passengers. The other machine was on its trip to New York.

Passengers treated at Marlboro Hospital by order of police were Richard Curtin, 26, Capital avenue, Hartford, Ct.; Martin Adler, 34, of Gerard avenue, Hartford; Harbid Durant, 23, Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn; Samuel Milner, 38, of Page street, Philadelphia; Morris Kluger, Franklin avenue, the Bronx.

Two who refused to go to the hospital were treated at Marlboro police headquarters, and gave their names as Miss Rena McLaughlin, Wendell street, Cambridge, and Benjamin Allinger, 49, of East Second street, New York.

Most of the passengers in the double-decked bus driven by Grove said they were asleep when the buses collided, but Miss McLaughlin said she was not.

LEG injury was suffered by Rena McLaughlin of Cambridge in crash of two buses in Sudbury. Nine persons were hurt, two seriously.

Wife Job Fight To Higher Court

The city of Somerville today asked the supreme court to uphold Mayor John M. Lynch's ouster of six working wives.

Ordered by a district court judge to reinstate the wives with back pay, City Solicitor Robert J. Muldoon asked Justice James J. Ranan for a review, claiming an error of law had been made.

Many of the families on relief in the large cities have members who could qualify for such jobs, Muldoon declared.

Judge Sullivan, Muldoon claimed, substituted his judgment for that of the mayor, who, under the pressure of economic necessity, may find that the work in a city department can be performed by fewer employees.

The six wives making the plea are Leah M. Estee, Emeline W. Edline and Frances Nugent of the water department, and Mary C. Welch, Helen Haselton and Frances Sharpe Lewis of the welfare department. They were ousted in May.

DEATH penalty will be sought for Mrs. Elda Duke, 33, now on trial for murder of her mother, Mrs. Caroline Slupsky of St. Louis, prosecuting attorneys indicated in questioning of veniremen.

Council Pushes Drive on Reds

Two orders, aimed at radicals and subversive activities, awaited the City Council today as it prepares for the weekly meeting, deferred yesterday out of respect for the late Pope Pius XI.

One was an order by Councilors Felix D. Chase of Back Bay and Robert Gardner Wilson of Dorchester, asking Mayor Tobin to consider the advisability of having 2000 copies of the Dies committee report on subversive activities printed and distributed in Boston.

The other was an order by Councilors Chase, Wilson and William A. Carey, formally inviting the Dies congressional committee to investigate radicals in Boston.

Intention of filing the orders was made known last night as the school committee closed its investigation of the American Student Union and its alleged activities in the Roxbury Memorial High School.

The school committee, at the meeting, adjourned without formal action except to commend Headmaster Robert E. Matherson for his stand against the organization.

School Committee Chairman Joseph Lee charged that Headmaster Matherson covered pupils in the school against joining the A.S.U.

1939 'HUCK FINN' TO RIDE FREIGHT HOME

Boy Sealed in R.R. Car, 7 Days, Swoons at Snow

He fancies himself in the role of a present-day "Huck Finn."

He likes freight trains.

He's traveled a lot on them, and when he gets out of the hospital—the result of being locked in a sealed freight car for seven and a half days—he's going back home to Connellsville, Pa., and, what's more—

He's going to hitch a ride home on another freight train!

Grimacing and unrepentant, Russell C. Donaldson, 15-year-old high school freshman who "jumped" the wrong freight car in Uhrichville, O., and landed in Peabody instead of in Florida, is frankly having a good time at all the fuss being made over him at the J. B. Thomas Hospital.

DENIES GIRL TO BLAME

"But," he says ruefully, "I guess I'll catch it when I get home." He was reassured, however, when told that his dad, Charles Donaldson, a public utilities company worker, was so relieved that the boy wasn't injured that he hadn't said anything about parental ire. As a matter of fact, his father directed that he be sent home "on the cushions" as soon as he was able to travel. But none of that for Russell.

"I'm a hobo, and I like it," he insisted.

"Scared? Just because I got locked in a car? No, sirree, I'm going home on a freight, just like I got here."

"Dad says I ran away because he wouldn't let me see my girl every night. She didn't have anything to do with it. I was heading for Florida to get a job for the winter. I don't like snow, see?"

SNOW DOWNS HIM

So when he tumbled out of the car full of sewer pipe, consigned to the M. B. Page Co., Peabody, he saw snow—and collapsed. He tumbled out into the kindly arms of William Houlden, an employee of the company, who took him to a restaurant and fed him before turning him over to police. They took him to the hospital.

"I was on five freights before that one," continued the youngster today, munching toast. "When I first left home I hopped one for Morgantown, W. Va. Then I went to Cumberland, Md., back to Fairmont, W. Va., to Glenwood Junction, and then to Uhrichville."

There, he said, he "spotted" two cars, one for Florida, one for Peabody. That night he got into the wrong car.

When he's ready police will see that he starts for home "on the cushions."

QUIZ 7 IN MURDER DRAMA OF WILDS

COLEBROOK, N. H., Feb. 14—Seven persons, including four small children, all witnesses to a bloody north woods drama of shooting and murder, today were questioned by police in the slaying of Mrs. Ida Proulx.

Meanwhile, doctors at County Hospital at West Stewartstown, where the woman died, fought to save the life of her husband, who was shot twice during the battle that caused his wife's death.

State Trooper Lloyd Sherman, called with the medical examiner and sheriff to a lonely wood camp on the main road north to Canada, said all the witnesses told a story of Proulx's shooting his wife and then himself.

The woman, 33 years old and mother of eight, was washing dishes for men working in woods around the camp when two shotgun blasts, coming through the kitchen window from outside, killed her.

Proulx, who had been away several weeks, burst into the cabin, his smoking gun in his hands, police said. His nine-year-old son, Leo, flung a piece of wood at him, striking him on the head, but the enraged father pointed at the men and children and cried:

"Get out of here, all of you!"

Albert Wheeler, 38, one of the lumber workers, grabbed a gun and fired at Proulx, police said, wounding the husband in his hip.

WPA Purge Gets Under Full Swing

Probe of alleged "chiselers" on Works Progress Administration rolls in Massachusetts was actively under way on a state-wide front today.

Under orders from Washington to purge WPA payrolls of all persons not legitimately entitled to such employment, Colonel John J. McDonough, state WPA administrator, assigned 90 investigators to areas in and about Springfield, Worcester, New Bedford, Fall River, Fitchburg and Lewiston.

He also assigned 140 other investigators to the metropolitan Boston district.

Meantime, United States Senator Adams of Colorado was seeking national legislation which would provide a jail penalty for WPA officials knowingly permitting any person not in actual need to remain on relief.

Adams, leader of the recent successful Senate fight to cut $100,000,000 from the President's relief bill, declared at Washington that such a provision would prevent "waste and extravagance" in relief administration.

Every one of the 120,000 men and women in WPA rolls in this state will be investigated as to their actual need, it was announced.

McDonough declared the state-wide investigation was under order of H. C. Harrington, national WPA administrator.

Deb Recovers From Rescue Plunge, But Pet Hound's in Doghouse Now

Miss Lucy Cochrane, Commonwealth avenue debutante, beautiful and clever, and Lackman, an Afghan hound, who seems to be beautiful and dumb, were doing even better than could be expected today following a narrow escape from drowning in the Charles river. At least Miss Cochrane was, Lackman, dumb as he is, seemed to discern a slight aloofness in the home of Mrs. Dudley L. Pickman, Jr., Miss Cochrane's mother.

The pretty society girl was hauled out by Laurence Cohen, 25-year-old lawyer of Arlington road, Brookline.

He saw her and the dog drop through the ice, as he sat in the window of a doctor's office in Bay State road.

The accident happened at the

LUCY COCHRANE

foot of Raleigh street, and Miss Cochrane was trying to rescue the picturesque Asiatic hound when she broke through.

She said she was walking Lackman and a Great Dane when the Afghan suddenly raced out on the ice, which broke under his weight. She went out on the ice to rescue him, it broke under her and she followed him into the icy water.

Miss Cochrane said:

"I thought both Lackman and I would drown. I was never so scared in my life. I struggled for minutes that seemed like days. Lackman, who is often stupid, howled and tried to save himself by pawing me, holding me back."

Mr. Cohen saved the society girl and the pedigreed dog by crawling out on thin ice. He insisted it had been ridiculously easy.

Gertrude Lawrence To Quit Susan Role

By PEGGY DOYLE

Next thing to missing her 17-year-old daughter, Pamela, who is at school in Lausanne, Switzerland, Gertrude Alexandra Dagmar Klassen (Gertrude Lawrence to you) is going to miss Susan, Rachel Crothers' chic, charming, selfish but thoroughly delightful birdbrain creation.

Miss Lawrence, whose Irish mother married a Dane and gave her a name too bulky for "lights," opens a three weeks' engagement at the Shubert in John Golden's enormously successful production, "Susan and God."

On March 4, she will part company with Susan, a favorite role in a brilliant theatrical career, to open in Samson Raphaelson's "Skylark," March 13 at the Shubert.

She has been playing Susan Trexel since October 7, 1937, when the play had its Manhattan premiere, established a record Broadway run and subsequently upset box office statistics in San Francisco, Chicago, Ottawa and other cities where it has been on tour.

BETTER THAN EVER

Miss Lawrence regrets divorcing Susan, because "the play" is playing better than ever," she told us yesterday in her Hitt-Caplan suite.

"If you liked it in New York (and who didn't?) you'll love it now for it has actually blossomed. Some of the New York critics found Susan's last-act turnabout out of character and charged Rachel (Miss Crothers, the playwright) with trying to whitewash her. I think you'll find Susan's final regeneration entirely logical. It's all in the implication. In the beginning of the play now she indicates that she loves Barrie, her husband.

Even Miss Lawrence admits that very few people who read "Susan and God" in play form like it, and it is natural to assume that it is her own enchanting performance that gives the Crothers comedy its box-officeumph.

"But no," insists Miss Lawrence, her hands raised in graceful protest, "I wanted to do it the instant Rachel read it to me. Noel Coward read it at my request and pleaded with me not to do it. But when he saw it the night it opened he loved it."

"CHILD OF THE THEATER"

Which is just that long ago since Noel Coward, whom she first met at Mme. Italia Conti's dramatic school of children in London, and she have seen each other. Miss Lawrence, who may be properly designated a "child of the theater," enjoyed several of her greatest mature successes in association with Coward.

"Noel called me from Hollywood the night of the 'Tonight at 8:30' broadcast. He's gone off to Samoa—to write, I'm sure, because he always sneaks off alone when he's in a writing mood. Dear old Noel, all he kept repeating on the phone was, 'Oh, dear! Oh, dear!'"

Miss Lawrence, in pithy, maternal tones, confides that Pamela (whose mother also gave her plenty of name—Pamela Barbara May Gordon-Howley) may follow a Noel Coward career. It is just possible, she suggests, that Pam, too, may eventually be dashing off with pad and pencil and put them together anywhere in the world "for she writes brilliantly."

"MAMA" LAWRENCE PROUD

"Wouldn't you like to run these pictures of Pam instead of me?" urged "Mama" Lawrence, violating all rules of procedure for great actress and international "toast of the town." "Isn't she beautiful? I'm so proud of her."

Own up to her? Why, my dear, she's my greatest production. Of course, I own up to her, have from the very beginning, the darling."

The British actress, beloved by many to be the stage's first comedienne, has greyhound hips, a waist you'd love to clutch (if you're the right sex), incandescent green eyes AND she eats what she likes.

DEFENSE PROGRAM O. K. SEEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (AP)—Democratic leaders predicted today the House would approve President Roosevelt's national defense program without alteration, despite Republican efforts to spread army airplane purchases over the next three years.

"The legislation will go through the House just as the President asked for it," said Chairman May, (D.) of Kentucky, of the military committee shortly before debate began.

Democratic chieftains were taking no chances, however, of being caught off-guard. They called a conference of the 261 party members in an effort to prevent a recurrence of recent Republican successes in amending administration legislation.

The Democrats expressed concern chiefly over keeping enough members on the floor always to have a majority.

More than a score of House Democrats met to consider reviving the so-called "liberal bloc." They agreed to work with the administration in seeking greater party solidarity.

The defense bill which came up for debate today covered only army phases of the general armament program.

Arrest Sought In Ward 8 Vote

Violence attended balloting today in Ward 8, where 10 candidates sought the City Council seat vacated by John F. Dowd following his election as sheriff of Suffolk County.

Application for a warrant against a former professional boxer was made in Roxbury court by a voter who said he had been slugged by the ex-fighter, who was accompanied by four men in a car.

Police later stopped the car in the South End, but released the five after questioning. The warrant application was made a short time later, on a charge of assault and battery.

The candidates' names in the order in which they appeared on the ballot are: George F. McMahon, Ed Maloot, Albert Gardner, John J. O'Brien, John F. Donahue, Michael Joseph Manning, William F. Harte, Thomas W. Howie, Paul J. Lawrence and Garrett J. Manning.

Roosevelt Set To Join Fleet

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 (INS)—President Roosevelt completed arrangements today to join the American fleet this weekend to observe the war games in the Caribbean.

The Chief Executive's continued improvement from his attack of grippe prompted Dr. Ross T. McIntire to give his patient clearance to leave Washington Thursday night.

A special train will take Mrs. Roosevelt to Florida City, rail line terminal. The President will motor from there Saturday morning over the new Keys highway to Key West.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL SAILS TOMORROW

Celebrates Mass in N. Y. Hotel Suite

By JAMES F. McENANEY
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Feb. 14—William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, one of four administrators in the destinies of the Holy See, prepared today for his voyage to the Vatican and his part in choosing the successor to Pope Pius XI.

The 78-year-old dean of the American hierarchy, issued from a Bahamas vacation, sails on the Saturnia at noon tomorrow for solemn deliberations of the Sacred College.

But before the balloting, the Boston Cardinal will play his important part in the Catholic conclave for the future of Christianity and civilization. Many and varied are the obstacles to be met and decided upon in a world bristling with dictatorships and Communism.

Belying press reports that His Eminence seemed tired and leaned heavily on a cane on his arrival here the Cardinal was briskly walking in Central Park this morning long before 90 per cent of New Yorkers were out of their beds.

CELEBRATES MASS.

At 6 a. m. he celebrated mass before a portable altar in his suite at Hotel Plaza, together with Rt. Rev. Monsignor Jeremiah F. Minihan, his secretary, and the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Michael J. Spillane of Brookline, both of whom will accompany him to Rome.

Other than a tribute to Pope Pius and to his church, Cardinal O'Connell had little to say today. Asked to confirm an itinerary scheduled to bring him to Sixtine Chapel about an hour before the important conclave begins, the Cardinal devoutly and simply answered:

"If I have the blessing of God, I'll be there."

After breakfast and a long walk, he attended to matters of his own diocese in Boston and prepared to receive Mayor LaGuardia and other New York dignitaries.

SAILS TOMORROW

He planned to remain in his hotel until going aboard the Saturnia early tomorrow, spending the last few hours before sailing on shipboard.

On the same boat will be Judge Paul Kirk of Suffolk Superior Court, husband of the Cardinal's niece, and Joseph O'Connell, the prelate's nephew.

The voyage will be leisurely, ending at Gibraltar on February 26. The Cardinal and his party will there transfer to the Neptunia and arrive at Naples at 8 a. m. on March 1. A 155-mile automobile trip will complete his mission to the Vatican.

There the Cardinal and his aides will be excluded with other members of the College of Cardinals, cut off from the rest of the world until they choose the next Pope.

B. C. HONORS POSTIFF

Boston College students attended solemn requiem masses in memory of the late Pope Pius this morning in the college chapel at University Heights.

DISSEMBARKING at New York from the Britannic after trip from Nassau, William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston is shown accompanied by his secretary, Monsignor Jeremiah F. Minihan, as they walk down gangplank. They sail tomorrow for Rome.

DUCE AND ROYALTY HONOR PIUS FRIDAY

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 14 (AP)—Premier Mussolini and the Italian royal family will pay funeral tribute on Friday to the Pope who reestablished peace between the Vatican and the Italian state.

The Fascist grand council, including Vittorio Emanuele, the royal court, and the diplomatic corps accredited to the King, including the United States ambassador, William Phillips, will attend mass for Pius XI on that day, proclaimed one of national mourning.

The Papal nuncio, Mgr. Francesco Borgogini-Duca, will celebrate the mass in the Church of Sant' Andrea de la Valle.

Pius was the first Pope to whom the Fascist government had been able to pay its respects since Mussolini had not yet come to power when Benedict XV died in 1922.

Friday's service has further significance since previous Italian governments had to refrain from official attendance at papal funerals because of the conflict between the Vatican and state which was settled by Pius in 1929.

Spain Joins Grief For Pope's Death

ROME, Feb. 14 (INS)—Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, chamberlain of the Holy Roman Catholic Church, today received from Premier Juan Negrin, head of the Spanish (Madrid) government a message saying:

"The government of Spain associates itself with the universal sorrow over the death of Pope Pius."

Boston Catholics Offer Prayers and Masses

Thousands of Boston and Massachusetts Catholics offered up special prayers today for the repose of the soul of the late Pope Pius XI.

A few hours prior to the pontiff's funeral today in Rome faithful members of his church gathered at early morning masses and said rosaries for the benefit of the Pope's soul.

A memorial mass scheduled to be sung in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross tomorrow morning at 10 a. m., when it was originally thought the funeral would be conducted, will still take place at that time.

Also in keeping with original plans, parochial schools will be closed tomorrow in tribute to the Postiff and the students will be requested to observe the day in keeping with the spirit of the Cathedral service.

At the end of the solemn high mass of requiem at the Cathedral, five absolutions will be pronounced in accordance with the ritual of the church.

All 43,000 members of the State Knights of Columbus were asked to offer Holy Communion, rosaries and other spiritual manifestations today for the repose of the Pope's soul.

Pius' Body Buried With Other Popes

greeted the living pontiff on his entrance into the cathedral.

Today's ceremonies began soon after 4 p. m. (10 a. m., EST). Witnesses already were in their places, the women wearing black veils, the laymen clad in tall coats with black vests and white ties and with papal decorations on their chests, the papal gendarmes, the noble and Palatine guards in their brilliant uniforms.

On Friday Premier Mussolini and the Italian royal family will pay tribute to the Pope, who re-established peace between the Vatican and the Italian state.

The aged Monsignor Arborio Meli Sant' Elia, papal majordomo, who would have played an important role in the burial ritual today, was absent because of a fever induced by emotional strain. His manifold labors of the last few days had compelled him to take to his bed and his functions were assumed by the prefect of apostolic ceremonies, Monsignor Carlo Respighi.

At his signal the body of Pius XI was lifted down from the high bier in the Chapel of the Sacrament before which hundreds of thousands of the faithful had passed since Sunday.

The pontiff was clad in a scarlet soutane over a white robe, a bishop's gold mitre and red alippers and gloves.

WHILE BELLS TOLL

A procession similar to that in which Pope Pius was carried Saturday from St. Peter's to the Chapel of the Sacrament.

Platoons of papal gendarmes were at its head. Then came the chapter of St. Peter's, carrying a crucifix and long lighted candles which shed a faint glow in the twilight of the cathedral.

Outside the sky was overcast. Little daylight penetrated the windows.

High up in the vaulted ceiling the measured tolling of St. Peter's bells echoed mournfully.

The bier was borne by eight chair-bearers, whose stalwart shoulders formerly had supported the portable throne in which the pontiff was carried to papal ceremonies.

The canon of St. Peter's, wearing black vestment but a white mitre, intoned the "exultant dominus."

The choir of the Julia Chapel began the chanting of the "Miserere" the moment he finished.

The chant was continued as the procession moved along the cathedral side.

Behind the bier walked Eusebio Cardinal Pacelli, emeritus, high priest of St. Peter's, and major members of the papal curia.

Meanwhile, other cardinals had moved to positions in the stalls of the canons in the Chapel of the Choir, where funeral masses are being said daily.

THREE CASKETS READY

In chairs at the right side of the altar were placed the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican. In other chairs were the Knights of Malta—a military order stemming from the days of the Crusades—Italian and Vatican aviators, representatives of the Order of the Holy Sepulchre, and various prelates of the Vatican court.

Cardinal Pacelli took his place on the gospel, or left side, of the altar, in a small throne chair near three caskets which already had been placed one inside the other.

The inner casket was of cypress wood, lined with zinc and red satin. On its cover was a cross of walnut. The middle casket was of lead, one-fourth of an inch thick and weighing just under 900 pounds. On its cover, toward the head, was a cross in relief.

CHOIR CHANTS

The outside casket was of polished elm, with a cover likewise surmounted by a cross.

The prelate bearing the crucifix in the procession carried it to the altar steps. Behind him the chapel choir took its place.

Intimate members of the papal court lined up before the cross on the lower steps of the altar.

The bier bearers drew near with their burden and slowly laid it on a velvet-covered wooden couch.

The chanting of the "Miserere" stopped, the "Exultant Dominus" was repeated, and then "In Paradisum" was chanted. A prelate chanted and imparted the absolution. The choir intoned the "Ingrédier." The bearers, now assisted by other attendants, lifted the bier while the choir chanted the Psalm "Sicut Servus."

BODY PUT IN CASKET

Attendants then lowered the pontiff into the inner casket. The assistant librarian of the Vatican chapter stepped forward to read the notarial act of the closing of the casket.

As he began to read, Msgr. Respighi covered the pontiff's face with a handkerchief of white silk.

The choir continued its chant. Monsignor Respighi placed another square of white silk over the folded hands. Then Monsignor Antonio Bacci, secretary of the briefs, read the "elogium," or biographical sketch and laudation of the pontiff which enumerated the outstanding accomplishments of his reign.

This finished, the paper was inserted in a copper tube and placed at the feet of the pontiff.

Monsignor Respighi placed beside it a large purse of red velvet, containing one copy each of the gold, silver, and bronze medals coined each year during Pius XI's pontificate, according to an old custom.

CASKET SEALED

Attendants proceeded to the closing of the inner casket.

The lid down, Cardinal Pacelli, Monsignor Respighi and the canons of St. Peter's tied two ribbons of violet silk across it and sealed the knots with sealing-wax.

The cover of the middle casket, that of lead, was then bent down and soldered along its edges. Seals were affixed to it also.

Notarial act of each of these operations was taken by Monsignor Bacci and read aloud.

The third, or outside casket, was closed with gold-plated screws.

When this was done, cardinals and prelates joined in reciting prayers for the dead.

The procession then re-formed and proceeded to the altar of the confession, where the framework for lowering the casket into the grottoes was in place and the casket was lowered to the crypt beneath.

HONG KONG, Feb. 14 (AP)—Japanese naval and aviation units landed today at Yulinkan, Hainan, the Chinese island near British and French empire facilities whose preliminary occupation Japanese diplomatic inquiries about Japanese intentions.

The United States destroyer John D. Edwards, with Captain John T. G. Stapler, commander of the navy's South China patrol, aboard, arrived today at Hankow, north Hainan port, to protect, if necessary, American lives and interests on Hainan.

The landing placed the Japanese navy in a potential base 750 miles east of Luzon, principal island of the Philippines.

In South China, another Japanese raid was said to have been directed at Chinese positions in the Luchow peninsula, opposite Hainan.

A Japanese spokesman said staff officers had arrived at Kiukiang, Yangtze river port below Hankow, and conferred with American and British officers on removal of 12 Americans with 53 other foreigners from Kuling, summer resort 15 miles south of there.

It was agreed that American and British officers would make an attempt to ascend Lushan mountain, where the town is located, and try to get the foreigners to leave before the threatened Japanese attack.

So far they have not been able to communicate with the group isolated at Kuling.

GERTRUDE LAWRENCE'S TRIUMPH THRILLS AT SHUBERT

Acting in 'Susan and God' Wins Audience at Premiere

By PEGGY DOYLE

Richard Griffiths' "Susan and God," which has earned Play-dinner John Golden's praise, made its Broadway debut last night at the Shubert Theatre. The play, which is based on the life of Susan, a young girl who was abandoned by her father and who later became a famous actress, was a triumph for the young actress, Gertrude Lawrence.

By a curious coincidence that dramatist Griffiths achieves with skilled purpose, Susan's first love is lost to her just as she is about to marry him.

How, then, this is achieved is left to the audience to decide. There is an electric, boyish voice about her Susan that makes this one of the most perfect of the young actress's performances. There is not a hint of her loss in her perfect of the young actress's performances.

in Vatican are used by Cardinals to meditate before election of successor to Pope Pius XI.

Stove

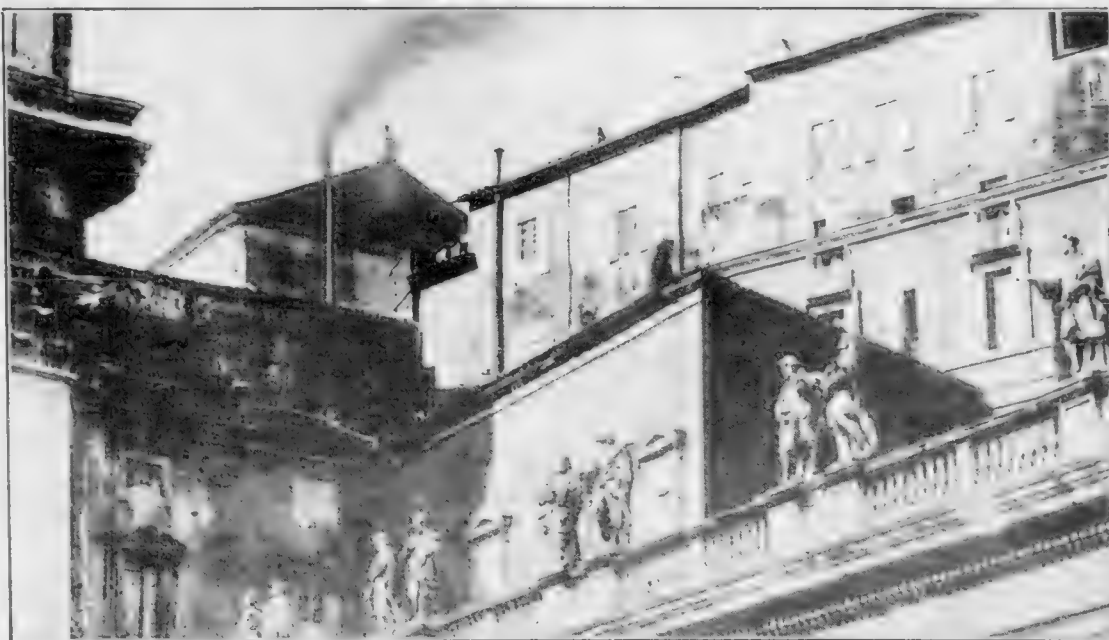

in Sistine Chapel is used to burn ballots. To make black smoke, damp straw is burned with ballots.

Sistine

Chapel, above, is where the Cardinals will convene to elect a successor to Pope Pius XI.

Pipe,

at right, erected atop Sistine Chapel for occasion, will indicate how Cardinals have voted. If black smoke emerges, no Pope has been named. If white smoke comes out, then new Pope sits on throne of St. Peter.

Smart Set Fashions

Redingotes and Doggy Prints

By ANNIE BRINK

Today we bring you two of the latest fashions in Miss Brink's for Spring, and supposed to be one of the most requested women's wear styles.

One of the new styles is the redingote, which is a long, flowing coat that can be worn over a dress or a blouse. It is a very elegant and stylish garment that is perfect for the spring season.

The other style is the doggy print, which is a pattern that features a dog's head. This is a very popular and playful design that is perfect for a spring wardrobe.

These two styles are perfect for the spring season and are sure to be popular with women. They are both elegant and stylish, and they are perfect for a variety of occasions.

For more information on these and other fashion trends, please contact Miss Brink at her studio. She is a professional fashion designer and is always up-to-date on the latest trends.

Love

Tale-Bearing Mars Love

By MISS FAIRMAN

In the old days, when a man and a woman were in love, they would tell each other tales of their love. This was a very romantic and beautiful tradition that has been passed down for generations.

Today, we have a new tradition. We have a new way of telling our love stories. We have a new way of expressing our feelings. We have a new way of saying 'I love you'.

And this new way is called 'Mars Love'. It is a very special and unique way of expressing your love. It is a way that is perfect for the modern woman.

Pine Fragrance in Bath Oil

By AIRLINE GOULD

There's nothing like a warm, luxuriously scented bath, I always say, to leave a girl up out of the dumps.

The degree of well-being your bath can give you is really amazing. It can make you feel like a queen.

For this reason, I have chosen to use Pine Fragrance in my bath oil. It is a very beautiful and refreshing scent that is perfect for a spring bath.

And this is why I recommend it to all my friends. It is a way of saying 'I love you' that is perfect for the modern woman.

The way to feel like a queen is to have a warm, luxuriously scented bath. This is the only way to feel like a queen.

For this reason, I have chosen to use Pine Fragrance in my bath oil. It is a very beautiful and refreshing scent that is perfect for a spring bath.

And this is why I recommend it to all my friends. It is a way of saying 'I love you' that is perfect for the modern woman.

Distinctive Flavor

'SALADA' TEA

By GEORGE HOLLAND

EXCLUSIVE:

With every major film studio rushing to market with patched-up newsreel shots from the life of the late Pope Pius XI, here's a believe it or not for Ripley and the amusement world... Right here in Boston, a five-reel biographical film of the mourned prelate has been available for days... A few days ago its value would have been in six figures...

It still has a real market value... It sounds almost incredible to those familiar with the motion-picture industry and the energy with which its executives operate... But the film is here... The prints were taken in the Vatican, and were made with the co-operation and, of course, the permission of the late Pope of Peace.

The negative of the five-reels is in the Vatican's archives, and the print in Boston is the only one in the Americas... Your reporter has seen the five reels of film... They are in a battered, much-dented film-can, and have been shown in churches of this vicinity...

It seems like an opportunity for some Boston branch manager to win himself a promotion, if he can close a deal on this end and get that print to a New York home office, thence to a laboratory for "dubbing" in some sound.

Once Over Lightly:

Sheffield John P. Dowd will receive further appointments until he holds the post of President of the City Hall... The City Council should not be slow to appoint him... Mr. Dowd is a man of high character and high ability... He is a man of high character and high ability... He is a man of high character and high ability...

Reardon is slated for the presidency of Worcester State College, this column is told on excellent authority, but meantime illness and worry has beset the Reardon family... The youngest of the six Reardon kids is critically ill with pneumonia... Rosemary, 5, is at Haynes Memorial Hospital with scarlet fever... Mrs. Reardon is bordering on collapse and has been ordered to bed.

The Andrew Jackson Associates of East Boston, with Larry McInnes in charge of the party, entertained a thousand-odd guests at Ocean View restaurant, Boston last night... Many members of both branches of the Association are coming, exactly a number of representatives of the various schools which the biennial sessions would permit them to do so.

FOR TEETH THAT SPARKLEDo AS YOUR DENTIST DOES—use Powder

Nothing else cleans and polishes teeth more quickly and leaves them more naturally white than POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know, uses Dr. Lyon's Powder.

All Cleansing Properties

As it is only the powder part of the toothbrush that cleans, it is only the powder that does the work. Dr. Lyon's Powder is the only powder that cleans and polishes teeth more quickly and leaves them more naturally white than any other powder.

Truck Subsidy

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW
Financial Editor

HUGH E. BRADSHAW, Financial Editor of the Boston Evening American, has been subsidized by the American Trucking Association for the past several years. That is the charge made by the transportation committee of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, who served on a board of inquiry into the matter.

Mr. Bradshaw is president of the New Haven Railroad and has been a member of the American Trucking Association since 1934. He is also a member of the board of directors of the American Trucking Association. The committee of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, which was organized in 1937, has been investigating the matter since that time.

The committee has found that Mr. Bradshaw has received a subsidy of $10,000 a year from the American Trucking Association. The committee also found that Mr. Bradshaw has received a subsidy of $5,000 a year from the American Trucking Association.

THE PHANTOM

LOVER AND FIGHTER -- KID McCOY'S OWN STORY

And McGinn, while a member of the Pacific Mail theatrical company, playing in Brooklyn, meets Julia and Julia falls desperately in love. Julia sees him knock out a ruddy in a street car; goes to New Bedford and sees grateful strikers carry him through the streets on their shoulders after he has put on a new suit.

And McGinn agrees to fight Tommy Ryan again in Syracuse, Ryan's home town.

And McGinn is informed that a scheme has been concocted to rob him of his title.

The police are trying to stop the bout in the fourth round, during a flurry brought about by an attack from Ryan and the decision is in favor of Ryan.

A FUGITIVE FROM THE LAW

Facing Ryan in the Empire Athletic Club in Syracuse, on Sept. 8, 1897, I set about cautiously to circumvent the plot to have the fight stopped by the police in the fourth round and Ryan declared a winner.

millionaire sportsman of Philadelphia, gave a memorable show at Grand Central Palace in honor of New York's new boxing law, sponsored by Jimmy Walker, then in the State Legislature.

I boxed four rounds with Tommy Ryan and he said, "Be careful, Kid, I remember all my teeth are knocked. And it's all your fault," he was grinning, "so don't break these."

In the old Puritan Athletic Club in Long Island City I met Dan Creedon, whom I had challenged in vain on my first visit to London. Creedon was one more Australian fighter holding the title of middleweight champion of the world.

Choyinski, Benny Murphy and Benny Falk, the latter now a well-to-do Detroit business man.

That was on December 17, 1917. The purse was $5000, and as winner took ten per cent of the gate receipts.

The result of this match was to make Choyinski the 112-pound champion of the world.

Alvin Karpis and his gang was the first to break into the world of crime.

arrested him. I swung off at the next stop, grabbed the hind end as I had done so many times in my baby days, and climbed into the top berth of a section Homer had hired.

Rid of my disgrace, I got off a wire to Mr. I said:

"Dear Sir,
I am writing you from a hotel here at a junction in the suburbs of St. Louis with a horse & carriage."

Then I learned that the train did not stop at the junction. So, from the berth, I jerked the bell cord. There was a great hurrah among the train crew to find out who pulled the cord, and I lay low.

As the train started up again, I swung off and hailed Doyle, who had started to drive away. The next night, in East St. Louis, I got $200 for refereeing a fight. That is how a champion made his money in that era, and it seemed like a fortune to me.

Fitzsimmons, Corbett and McCoy were the center of fight talk in sporting circles everywhere. The British papers gave me much space. Fitz and I were actually middleweight. My best fighting weight then was around 160. Fitz was a little heavier, while Corbett was light.

I had the most to gain by whipping either of them, since they were heavyweights, and I was a heavyweight, while they both had a lot to lose by beating me.

Alex Fitzsimmons knocked out Corbett in Carson City, Nev. With his famous solar plexus blow it was over in ten seconds. He was one and the heavyweight title

NEWSBOYS BACKING ABE DENNER

Honey Melody Title At Stake Thursday

Abe Denner, the best Jewish boxer developed in New England since the days of that classy lightweight, Kid Goodman, has elaborate plans for the future.

If he wins the title from Honey Melody, the New England lightweight champion, next Thursday night, at the Argonne A. A. glove carnival, in Mechanics Hall, he will immediately set out for bigger game.

Denner has undergone a special course of preparation. His early work was done at the West End House, one of Boston's leading athletic organizations, and he is now training diligently at Bob Berenson's big estate at Lincoln.

The boys of the West End House have organized a cheering clan and they will be much in evidence Thursday night in Mechanics Hall.

The 12 rounds which is scheduled is the longest route that has been booked for Denner to date.

Buster Carroll of Lowell will have at least 500 cheering for him when he clashes with Kid Cocco of New Haven. The Lowell router has been given three sections overlooking the ring.

Pat Foley of Worcester will fight Johnny Cabello, the Harlem boxer who stopped Joey Archibald of Providence in two rounds. Foley is in good fighting form as he recently proved when he stopped Frankie Terranova in seven rounds at Worcester.

Chmielewski Faces Real Test In Rossi Bout

The startling win streak being compiled by Henry Chmielewski, invader from Poland who has caught the eye of all experts, may be halted Friday night at the Garden when he fights Johnny Rossi, Worcester, in one of three 10-round main bouts in the Goodwin A. C. boxing show.

While Rossi is not ranked with the leading 160-pounders in the fist business, by any means, he is as rough and tough as they come, able to hit a healthy lick and to take it. He has a wide edge on Chmielewski in experience and may spring an upset.

Chmielewski has walked all opponents tossed at him since he was brought to this country by Stan Zbyszko. He looks like plenty of fighter and there's been talk of Chmielewski getting a shot at Billy Kid Conn if he keeps coming as he has since landing in the U. S.

The fans like the Pelling Pole a little because he's not a fancy Dan fighter like most invaders from across the Atlantic, but a kid who'll walk in with both fists flying to punch it out.

The other 10-round main bouts on the Goodwin A. C. show—Matchmaker Rip Valenti is staging a boxing "bargain night" for the fight fans—will find Merry Mike Kaplan, Dorchester, battling Jimmy Leto, Hartford, Conn., and Salvatore Barolo, East Boston, tackling Pete Scatzo, New York.

HONEY MELLODY

SONNENBERG TACKLE ACCEPTED BY A.W.A.

Gus Sonnenberg's flying tackle is a legitimate part of wrestling and, as such, Gus may use it all he wants when he clashes with "The Shadow," boogy man of the mat, in the main event of Promoter Paul Bowser's all-star tournament Thursday night at the Garden.

This decision was handed down by the American Wrestling Association after a protest by both "The Shadow" and his manager, voluble Eddie Quinn of Wallingford.

Mr. Quinn, acting as spokesman, said:

"They ruled that 'The Shadow's' arm bandage was illegal and now they have the nerve to say the flying tackle is a wrestling hold."

"The next thing you know they'll be saying it's O. K. to bring a club into the ring with you. It's just a case of everybody favoring Sonnenberg, and I guess he'll need all the favoritism he can get."

Sonny, meanwhile, having scored his second decision over The Shadow in the matter of rules, felt grieved when he learned the A. W. A. had voted in his favor. He spent two hours in a local gymnasium and that tackle took up most of the time.

Gus is still hopeful of gaining back the title and he thinks the tackle about four or five of them to be exact—will be enough to remove Mr. Shadow from the title picture.

WATT POWELL MAKES BELATED CALL ON B'S

During the winter between the 1913 and 1914 baseball seasons, George Stallings made a deal with the Seattle club, whereby Bill James, Bert Whaling and Watt Powell were acquired for the Braves from the Pacific Coast League.

Bill James and Bert Whaling came East and cut themselves in for a cut of the 1914 world series money but apparently Watt Powell was delayed en route, for he didn't put in an appearance here until yesterday.

Watt Powell had been ordered to report to Manager Stallings on May 3, 1914 but shortly before that day he broke his wrist and Leslie Mann replaced him.

Powell is now the big boss of the Charleston Club of the Mid-Atlantic League and he came up from the West Virginia mountains with the hopes of arranging a working agreement with Bob Quinn. He was in conference with the president of the Bees for a couple of hours.

WATT'S MEMORY KEEN

Prior to his interview with Bob Quinn, Powell was introduced to Duffy Lewis, but apparently they had met before for Watt recognized the old time Red Sox star.

"Hello, Duffy," was Quinn's opening remark. "I haven't seen you since 1911 when you trained on the Coast with the Red Sox and I was playing left field for Frisco."

Watt Powell is a pretty guy and the only person needed to make the afternoon a complete success was Jack Onslow.

One of the best stories that Powell related concerned George Baumgartner, the old St. Louis Browns' right hander, who wasn't a Rhodes Scholar by a wide margin. Baumgartner received $250 a month from the Browns and invariably he was paid off with one dollar bills. From the size of the wad of money, Baumgartner was under the impression that he couldn't possibly be getting less than $2500 per month.

During his short stay with the Browns, Baumgartner beat Ed Walsh, the White Sox spit baller, who at the time was at the peak of his very successful career, 3 to 2 in a 12 inning game.

IN WRONG LEAGUE

After the game, the Browns rushed up to congratulate Baumgartner, who was wearing his newly acquired laurels very modestly.

"Do you know who you beat today, George?" asked one of the Browns.

"No," was the reply. "Who was it?"

"None other than Ed Walsh, the greatest pitcher in the league."

"Well, if he's so good, what's he doing in this league? I should think he could get a job in the National League."

Beavers Next To Face Olympics

The battered Boston Olympics will take up the gauntlet next Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon at the Boston Garden with the first of their exhibition foes, the Beavers from St. John, New Brunswick.

The Beavers are the champions of the Maritime provinces and by far the best team that section has boasted in years. Their record against senior teams from Quebec reveals that they have a club that compares favorably with any outfit in Eastern Canada.

Cunningham Races Lash In Providence

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 14 (INS)—Facing formidable opposition from Don Lash, veteran twomiler, who has elected to run in the mile event, Glen Cunningham tonight seeks to retire the title trophy in the second annual Knights of Columbus track meet at Rhode Island auditorium.

Cunningham won the first race last year, turning in the time of 4:14.8 for the 32-lap track.

Lash, aided by Gene Venke, whose injured leg muscle has responded to treatment should give Cunningham plenty of difficulty in tonight's race.

A double feature—two 600-yard races—have been scheduled.

One, the Invitation, brings together Harold Cagle, winner of the event at the Boston K. C. games; Dick Gill, former Boston College captain; Charlie Beetham, Ohio, and Doug Raymond, former Boston University star.

The other, for intercollegiate runners, finds Jimmy Herbert, N. Y. U. world record holder; Frank Maclean, Northeastern, and Wesley Wallace, Fordham, assigned to the starting line.

A total of 4 colleges were represented in individual and relay events, among them Harvard, Brown College, Holy Cross, Boston, Rhode Island State, Northeastern, Tufts, Middlebury and New Hampshire.

Expert Beats Clink In Debut

Ken Kling, creator of those animated miracle pickers of horse races, Joe and Asbestos, got off to a flying start with his new Boston Evening American feature—the DAILY LATE SPECIAL when his first pick, Waxing, won the sixth race at New Orleans and paid $3.40.

In case you got a little late, this new feature by Ken Kling appears exclusively in the Boston Evening American as an added feature to his daily picks which still appear in the Boston Daily Record.

Kling started a separate bankroll of $20 for his Daily Late Special in the American.

The horse appeared in code and when decoded through Ken Kling's Joe and Asbestos booklet, details of which you can find in an advertisement on this page, it was Waxing in the sixth at Fair Grounds.

Waxing gave the new Joe and Asbestos bankroll in the Boston Evening American a boost of $3.40 making the roll now $22.40.

See the accompanying Joe and Asbestos cartoon for today's selection in code.

Incidentally, Kling had five winners in the Daily Record yesterday, including John's Heir, which paid $16.20.

Of Old Champions

SERGEANT EDDIE MACK of the Argonne front dropped a picture on our desk showing Abe Denner of the West End in a boxing pose with Martin Canole of Fall River. Denner came into boxing by way of the Hearst All-America boxing tournaments. Two years ago last fall he won the Eastern championships, and later won important tournaments in Havana and in Detroit.

There wasn't a Hearst All-America grand national championship that year. If there had been, Denner would have won it. At 126 pounds he could make his opponents jump through hoops. George Freeman of the Irish American A. A., Gene Driscoll, "Tam" Sheehan and Tom Kanaly used to get headaches when Denner would send in his entry for a show.

"We now won't get any more entries," Freeman would say. "I will have to end up boxing Denner myself."

The amateurs didn't want any part of Denner, and would try to avoid meeting him.

The occasion for having Denner photographed with Martin Canole at Bob Berenson's estate at Lincoln is the fact the West End newboy is battling Honey Mellody for the New England lightweight championship at Mechanics Building on Thursday night.

Canole was one of the greatest lightweights of his period, and Steve Mahoney, who is doing the publicity for the Argonne Club, figured it would be a grand idea to have a youngster like Denner posing with the lightweight star of other years.

I have always felt that boxing didn't have enough sentiment about its oldtimers. I would suggest to Steve Mahoney that he invite Canole, Eddie Murphy, Frankie Mack, Terry Brooks, Charley Parker, Fred

At the recent Baseball Writers' Dinner those persons present got their greatest thrill out of seeing Bill Carrigan, Hughie Duffy, Jesse Burkett and the other oldtimers who attended the gala affair. Next year the Baseball Writers are going to have a special head table for these famous diamond heroes, and set up champagne for them as well as flowery speeches.

McCoy Shooting for Pastor Bout

NOW THAT Al McCoy has evened his score with Buddy Knox, he wants to clash with Bob Pastor again.

"When Pastor received the decision over me in the Garden early last Summer," said McCoy today, "I wasn't at my best as a result of a long layoff. My timing of punches was particularly poor, but when I did get the range in the seventh and eighth rounds I punched Pastor around."

"I felt like my old self as I outscored Knox. I could name the spot where my punches were going to land which means I was razor sharp. I have asked 'Rip' Valenti of the Goodwin Club to sign me with Pastor. I know I shall win."

"I weighed 184½ pounds for Knox and was very strong. The time I spent in the Maine woods helped build me up. Inside of a year I shall weigh 190 pounds. Mike Jacobs can then bring on Joe Louis, and I shall give the champion his hardest fight."

100 Years of Baseball Civil War Spread Game To South, Middle-West

(Organized Baseball is making elaborate preparations for the centennial celebration of the founding of a purely American outdoor sport that has progressed through amazing stages of evolution to become the most soundly governed professional game in the world. At the end of 100 years, it is still expanding and is firmly entrenched on the greatest American game for boys to play and men to watch. It is a sport that blankets the entire country for six months every year and intrigues millions of patrons. The history of this game will be told briefly in a series of articles by Sid Mercer, baseball writer for the Hearst Newspapers and the International News Service.)

CHAPTER III Civil War Influence

By SID MERCER

Outbreak of hostilities between the North and the South gave baseball what was apparently a serious setback as a home pastime. Teams were disbanded and players signed up for the serious business of war.

The game languished for a time, but young Northern soldiers spread it through the Union armies. The result was a widespread wave of crude baseball through the nation when armies were disbanded in 1865.

Soldiers who had played the game in camps scattered to every part of the country to become missionaries of the new sport. Thus baseball was popularized in the Middle West and in the South, for Confederate soldiers had learned something about it through picket line and prison camp contacts with the Yankees.

LINCOLN O. K'D PASTIME

Abner Doubleday, a regular army captain, proposed that baseball be featured in camp recreational programs. Colonel A. G. Mills, later to become president of the National League, related that he packed a ball and a bat as part of his army equipment.

His regiment was one of the first to organize a team. President Abraham Lincoln, who had played "town ball" during his youth in Illinois, heartily approved the new game as a pastime for his "giving men."

On Christmas Day, 1862, 40,000 Union soldiers witnessed a game at Hilton Head, South Carolina, between a picked team and the crack "nine" of Duryea's Zouaves, a New York regiment.

ENTHUSIASM SOARS

Euphorism for the game soared as soldiers of both sides returned to their homes. Strong amateur and semi-pro teams sprang up everywhere. Town rivalries spread through the land. At a New York baseball convention, late in 1865, nearly 100 clubs were represented.

Professionalism had crept in, however, and became an acute issue. In 1867, the National Association of Washington, under the lead of Arthur P. Gorman, afterward United States Senator from Maryland, and with George Wright as team captain, made the first Trans-Allegheny tour, going as far as St. Louis.

This team met its only defeat at Rockford, Ill., by a score of 28 to 23 because of inability to hit in the pinches against Albert G. Spalding.

A 17-year-old pitcher for the Forest City Club.

There were some salaried players on the Forest City. In 1868, the Cincinnati Red Stockings were organized on semi-professional lines and in 1869, the entire team was placed under salary.

Coming out openly as the first professional team, the Red Stockings toured the country from New York to San Francisco without a defeat. Except for a 17-17 tie with the Haymakers of Troy, N. Y., their season's record in 65 games, from May 10 to Nov. 3, was perfect.

Compared to modern baseball salaries, the incomes of the Red Stockings were modest, indeed, but they thought they were well paid. George Wright, captain, manager, shortstop and star of the outfit, drew down $1400 as top man. Harry Wright, his brother, was paid $1200 as a center fielder. Asa Brainard, a bearded pitcher, and Fred Waterman, third baseman, rated $1000 each.

PRO FEVER SPREADS

Five others were paid $800 each and Dick Hurley, the lone substitute, gratefully accepted $600 for his season's labors. Doug Allison was the catcher, Charley Gould the first baseman, Andy Leonard the left fielder, and Cal McVey the right fielder.

The Red Stockings did not lose a game until they were defeated on June 14, 1870, by the Atlantics of Brooklyn in the city. The game went 16 innings before the Reds were vanquished, 8 to 7. That was a real sensation.

Several other strong professional clubs were launched that year.

The Red Stockings disbanded in the fall of 1870 and were scattered among other clubs. Starting in 1871 were the Bostonians, the original Athletics of Philadelphia, the Atlantics of Brooklyn, the White Stockings of Chicago, the Marylanders of Baltimore, the Mutuals of New York, Nationals and Olympics of Washington, Unions of Morrisania, Haymakers of Troy, Forest City of Cleveland, Forset City of Rockford and Kekiongas of Fort Wayne—all out and out professional teams.

PRO BODY ORGANIZED

The National Association of Professional Baseball Players was organized in 1871 after a battle between the amateur and professional elements at the annual meeting of the National Association of Baseball Players.

Professional clubs banded together that Spring and inaugurated a championship schedule with ten cities represented—New York, Boston, Troy, Philadelphia, Washington and Brooklyn in the East and Chicago, Cleveland, Rockford and Fort Wayne in the West.

A "National Association of Amateur Baseball Players" was formed in 1874 with seven college and ten amateur clubs represented. This organization fell to pieces in 1874. Since then, baseball as a national sport has been under professional control except for supervision of the amateurs by college authorities and the A. A. U.

The first written rules of the game are outlined in Chapter 4 of "100 Years of Baseball" in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.
